Environmental Concerns

Campers are lucky to visit the most beautiful, and fragile spots on the earth and the least respect for these unspoiled places will be, to keep them very much natural. Your sensitivity for the immediate surrounding should influence every one around, and your little initiative will create more awareness in your porters, and local people, and help in going through the following procedures with your local field staff.

- Do not leave anything except your foot prints on the trail, and do not take any thing except photos and refuse.
- Encourage biodegradable or burnable packing.
- Do not leave waste burning to the last moment, process all your litter, dig latrine pits, burn paper, collect plastic, tins, and bag them for carrying out.
- Dig toilet holes where necessary at least 50 meters away from the camp, and cover them with the pile of earth at departure.
- Carry plastic bags to collect any toilet papers, and chocolate/candy wrapping used during the day, and burn them at the camp.
- Go well away from the trail and the camp for peeing in order to avoid unpleasant stench.
